

Daji

@dajiadamigallery

Darejan Adamashvili, also known as Daji Adami, is an artist born in Georgia, a country situated at the crossroads of Europe and Asia. This unique cultural positioning profoundly influences her work, which blends traditional folklore with modernist elements to create a style that is distinctly her own.

Daji views the artist as a “citizen of the earth,” someone who articulates the unwritten laws of life—laws that are not meant to be read but deeply felt. Her philosophy and approach give her art a universal resonance, transcending geographical and cultural boundaries. Now based in the United States, Daji continues to develop new collections. She considers America an ideal environment for artistic exploration, offering a space where creativity knows no limits. Her work embodies a harmonious fusion of her Georgian roots and the boundless possibilities of her adopted home.
